TACTICAL TIPS + TRICKS: General Tips 2: Try To Play Against Stronger Opponents

Hi guys, when you play chess, you should definitely try to play as much as possible, because "practice really does make perfect!" But, in saying that, I often see up and coming aspiring young players shy away from playing against stronger players. Even in tournaments, sometimes, players of all ages might incorrectly think "oh how am I ever going to beat him or her? They're really, really good." This is ok, but a better way to approach these sorts of games against stronger opponents, is- as always, "what can I learn from the experience?" For, if you play the same person 1000 times over and you win every game, you don't learn as much as if you had one game against a really strong player and lose. Remember, when in doubt, you can ask your coach for a game :)
